

The Flight of Spring

Once upon a time and still now, in a forest not far away, a village of bunnies who are the guardians of the woods. If you look just a little more down to the clearing you can see a small house inhabited by four brothers, each one has something special, Ginger the bravest and sparkling of all is always ready for new adventures is not afraid of anything or anyone but, thankfully behind to her there is always Pistacchio, the brother who saves her from the dangers in which she ends up .

Then there are the small Mirtillo and Miele, who love to stay at home to the warmth and wait for brothers return home to tell to them new stories and new adventures.

All four bunnies have something in common, they love to hear the stories of their swallows friends that have returned from their trip because spring has arrived. These little birds never fail to stop to describe the beauties that they visit in their long journeys. The hot sunny places or the colder once are reason to talk and to dream for the little bunnies who can not wait to be able to visit themselves these magical places.

One morning Pistacchio and the little Mirtillo go to walk in to the woods and they hear a strange noises behind some bushes. Very slowly they came close and they see a rabbit talking to himself trying to make something work. Intrigued by this character, they become friends and they find that he's the famous Gianduiotto, the cutest rabbit inventor in the world.

He asked them if they wanted to help him build the first hot air balloon for rabbits. Mirtillo comes up to him and asks him what is it a "Hot Air Balloon", Gianduiotto with a big smile explains that it is the only way in which the rabbits around the village will be able to travel by flying in the clouds to discover the beauty that there are at the beyond the forest. Excited about this news they bring to work with him and quickly they can run the balloon.

Pistacchio ask if they can try to fly and to the delight of the two brothers, the answer is affirmative, racing they come home and tell everything that happened to Ginger and Miele, they can not believe their ears! All four pack up the suitcases, without being seen they go from Gianduiotto that awaits them at the borders of the clearing and they set off on this new adventure.

They can not believe their eyes, the world is magnificent under them, Miele, however, is a bit scared and closes her eyes because she feel sorry for her friends, but her brothers console her and they promise to her that one day all the rabbits will have the same luck that they have: to travel the world looking for new adventures and new things to see ...

... the sweet adventures continue on...
